The third major evolution of the popular action role-playing (RPG) Grand Chase is underway! Grand Chase Online (GC:O) is a fantasy action RPG where you can create your own character in a vast world full of excitement. From your starting class, you can freely develop yourself as a Warrior, Ranger, Wizard, or Magus, combining a variety of skills that will create your unique fighting style. In addition to this, we are adding numerous new features in this new Grand Chase: your character will now evolve in five stages through increased stats and skills, and you will be able to freely develop your character to its full potential through combat and magic. For a closer look at the Grand Chase: ONLINE RPG that will be released on December 5, take a look at our GC:O overview at: ----- Greetings from the Grand Chase Development Team Guild Night Blueprints are a way to shape the future of our games. Sometimes known as "Tomes of Potential", they are used by our designers to test the viability of certain ideas. ----- Important: Please Note While we are currently working on a new Grand Chase Online map, we will not be revealing any new information about the game until its release. Guild Night Blueprints preview below. This Blueprint is an advanced one-on-one PvP map in PvP mode. In PvP mode, all players are free to create teams of two or three players. - The Arena portion of the map deals with a two-on-two PvP battle at the center of a floating platform. Battles unfold as vehicles clash on the floating battleground. - The Shipyard portion of the map is an open sky map with a design similar to the style of the Black Desert map "Five Winds". - The Camping portion of the map is a lush, green field that serves as a training area for players on their way to the battleground. - The Seaside Lodges are the individual houses of the map, arranged in a circular manner around the edge of the combat arena. - The Sea is the area where the boats of the players are stored. Seating is available in the boats of the players. - The Factory

Q: How to make a child table based on a field on the parent table in SQL I have a table containing a list of buildings CREATE TABLE Buildings (BuildingID VARCHAR(50), BuildingName VARCHAR(255), CreationDate DATE) I have another table with building employees. (for sake of simplicity, BuildingID is primary key, used as foreign key with the table buildings) CREATE TABLE BuildingEmployees (EmployeeID INTEGER, BuildingId VARCHAR(50), BuildingName VARCHAR(255), EmployeeName VARCHAR(255)) What I want is a query that returns all of the employees in the building named 'ABC', but also returns all of the buildings that the employees work in. Can anyone give me some pointers on how to do this?

A: How do you store the relation between employee and building? You need a 1:N relationship and a table to store the N-M relation, where N is an enumeration of all the buildings. CREATE TABLE BuildingEmployees (EmployeeID INTEGER, BuildingID INTEGER, BuildingName VARCHAR(255), EmployeeName VARCHAR(255), CONSTRAINT fk_employee_building FOREIGN KEY (BuildingID) REFERENCES Buildings (BuildingID)) Q: Adding first name and last name label to django form in a field class I am creating a form for a django project. However, I want to display the first name and last name that the person has signed

Of course, the weekend weather forecast looks absolutely terrible: sunny, in fact, there's even the occasional shower forecast. While you're out there could you be picking up some video games and maybe, just maybe, the hi-fi laptop needed to get your gaming PC working? If that's so, then you could do worse than load up one of Santa's many little movie players that took up residence on our Christmas List and simply place the games disk in and push up the play button. Unfortunately things are rarely that simple. You want to play, say, a favourite from the Atari 2600, right? Then you'll need to run an emulator. The problem comes that most emulators are bulky, slow, and most of all, Windows-only. While it's possible to run them on a Ubuntu based laptop, the problem is that 95 per cent of people, and we include ourselves, don't download and install Ubuntu just for the game emulator. What we need is a small, fast, versatile machine, with a built-in wi-fi or GSM modems that can emulate multiple types of gaming devices, but for $200-$300 you're unlikely to find something quite like this. So instead Santa has decided to build his own wi-fi gizmo. It'll be listed in a day or so, and is priced at a modest $240 to buy. He's also built a really cool Fire TV Streaming video box that you can add to the wi-fi gizmo, using a PCI Wi-Fi card, for
