Field of the Invention The present invention relates to the art of printed circuits and, more particularly, to a coated copper base laminate for electrical circuit fabrication, as well as to a composite sheet or article of manufacture comprising the same. 2. Description of the Related Art The use of copper for the manufacture of electrical circuit boards has become widespread in recent years. In fact, commercial applications of copper circuitization include use in printed wiring boards (PWB's), flexible circuit substrates, multilayer interconnects for microelectronic packages such as semiconductor chips and related devices. Copper circuit boards are typically manufactured in a laminating process wherein at least one circuitized copper layer is bonded to an intermediate conductor or core sheet using an adhesive. This process is repeated with a series of additional patterned copper layers, with the final board typically being comprised of a number of individual, contiguous copper circuit layers that may be laminated or bonded together using suitable adhesive and copper cladding sheets to form a multilayer printed wiring board. A commonly used core sheet is glass-reinforced polybutylene terephthalate (GFR-PBT) which is sometimes called "TPE" for short. A GFR-P
